Their health is strictly monitored while in the care of their foster home. However, due to the stressful situations under which many of these animals come to JFAA there is always the chance an animal is incubating a disease without showing clinical signs. We recommend a visit to your veterinarian within seven (7) days of the adoption date. We believe these canines to be in good health, but JFAA does not guarantee the health of any canine or assume any financial responsibility for future veterinary costs. All JFAA animals have been spayed/neutered prior to adoption, wormed, and heart wormed tested, and are up to date on shots, recommended by the veterinarian
